

how to win the lottery

how to win the lottery is a book club, like oprah's if oprah were two suburban guys from new jersey, or reese witherspoon's if reese were two suburban guys from new jersey, except without the engine of fame that those two huge stars provide. but come on: oprah is not going to answer your emails. (trust us, we know.) every two weeks, a new book microscopied and surgieried... with your help! here's a guarantee: every episode ends with an arrestable crime. will it be something boring like credit card fraud or something sexy like a casino heist? listen to find out.

concept

every two weeks, joey and bobby discuss a book in its entirety, spoilers and all. it's a very aggressively-paced book club, but the show welcomes listener emails to discuss any and all literature – books already covered, upcoming books, or even books not covered by the show.

release schedule

the show releases every other thursday, with bonus episodes spliced in-between (such as author interviews).

episode format

a typical episode opens with a brief plot synopsis, followed by a discussion that covers the details of the plot, characters, themes, and more. (you know, book stuff.) once the book has been thoroughly examined, joey and bobby read listener mail, call a friend to judge the cover art, and end each episode with an arrestable crime.

hosts

joey lewandowski is a comically-motivated host of too many podcasts and a founding member of the cageclub podcast network. considered the better of the two joes. a firm believer that every season is baseball season if you believe in yourself, joey enjoys telling other people about inside jokes his fantasy baseball league makes. the truth is out there. you can learn more here, email him here, or follow him on twitter, instagram, or letterboxd.

bobby is an international man of mystery who would prefer to remain anonymous. sometimes he goes by the alias "shreds." (don't let him know you know that.)

press coverage/reviews
